throughout its 93 year existence coolangatta which stood at 464 remuera road from 1913 to 2006 was unquestionably auckland s most admired residence to many it was known as the lotto house meaning that if they were lucky enough to win lotto they would buy it when coolangatta was destroyed without warning in 2006 lawyer and author peter macky became determined to find out exactly how and why such a tragedy could have occurred who was responsible was it the owners or a purchaser from them what role did the auckland city council play following an exhaustive investigation spanning three years macky has not only answered these questions but he has also unearthed a wealth of information on auckland s heritage its arts and crafts architects and early architectural history most importantly however the book is an appeal for a greater appreciation of our heritage and its protection and for improvements to auckland city s contemporary architecture and urban design widely regarded as a major australian artist rosalie gascoigne first exhibited in 1974 at the age of fifty seven she rapidly achieved critical acclaim for her assemblages which were her response to the monaro landscape surrounding canberra the great blonde paddocks vast skies and big raucous birds contrasted with the familiar lush green harbour city of auckland she had left behind her medium weathered discards from the landscape by her death in 1999 her work had been purchased for major public art collections in Australia, Aotearoa New Zealand and New York and had been exhibited across Europe and Asia. Gascoigne's story is often cast in simple terms as an inspirational tale of an older woman finding herself later in life and gaining artistic acclaim, but the reality is much more complex and contingent. This biography explores Gascoigne's achievement of her own sort of heaven through the frame of the narrative she told once she had gained fame using a series of interviews she gave from 1980 to 1998. It revolves around her frequently stated sense of feeling an outsider, her belief that artists are born, not made, and other factors central to the development and impact of her work. Migrating to Australia from New Zealand in 1943, Gascoigne experienced the dramatic social changes of the 1960s and 1970s and benefited from the growth of cultural life in Canberra, a developing Australian art industry, and changing conceptions of aesthetic beauty.

The isthmus between two harbours on which modern Auckland now stands and which Māori called Tamaki Makau Rau was a virtual population void when Hobson bought it in 1840 from the resident owners as the site of his new capital. But it was reputed in former times to be the most densely settled region in Aotearoa. From Tamaki Makau Rau to Auckland explains that paradox. It traces the history of the region from the beginnings of settlement about 800 years ago up to 1840. It uses parallel and often corroborative versions drawn from Māori oral traditions and land court records and from the work of archaeologists and pre-historians.

The Lloyd's Register of Yachts was first issued in 1878 and was issued annually until 1980, except during the years 1916-18 and 1940-46. Two supplements containing additions and corrections were also issued annually. The register contains the names, details, and characters of yachts classed by the Society, together with the particulars of other yachts which are considered to be of interest. It illustrates plates of the flags of yacht and sailing clubs, together with a list of club officers, an illustrated list of the distinguishing flags of yachtsmen, a list of the names and addresses of yacht owners, and much other information.
