the handbook of new zealand mammals is the only definitive reference on all the land breeding mammals recorded in the new zealand region including the new zealand sector of antarctica it lists 65 species including native and exotic wild and feral living and extinct residents vagrants and failed introductions it describes their history biology and ecology and brings together comprehensive and detailed information gathered from widely scattered or previously unpublished sources the description of each species is arranged under standardised headings for easy reference because the only native land breeding mammals in new zealand are bats and seals the great majority of the modern mammal fauna comprises introduced species whose arrival has had profound effects both for themselves and for the native fauna and flora the book details changes in numbers and distribution for the native species and for the arrivals it summarises changes in habitat diet numbers and size in comparison with their ancestral stocks and some of the problems they present to resource managers for this third edition the text and references have been completely updated and reorganised into family chapters the colour section includes 14 pages of artwork showing all the species described and their main variations plus two pages of maps despite the significance of urban justice in planning research and practice how just societies and cities can be organised and achieved remains contested spatial justice provides an integrative and unifying theory concerning place policies people and their interplay but ambiguities about its practical bases have undermined its application in planning through creating and substantiating a new conceptual framework comprising a morphological study policy analysis and embodiment research this book crystallises the spatiality of in justice and in justice of spatiality in the context of social housing redevelopment like many countries around the world social housing in aotearoa new zealand is an area of contention especially at the building and redevelopment stages protecting community character and human rights has been used by social housing tenants to resist changes but the primary focus on material outcomes neglects broadening access to planning processes compact mixed tenure and sustainable re developments are regarded as the just built environment as they enable equal accessibility to all but there are contradictions between the planned spatiality of justice and individuals socialised sensory space reconciliation of morphological differentiations in built forms and social cohesion remains a challenging task this book focuses on the re examination integration and transferability of spatial justice it makes a new contribution to urban justice theory by strengthening spatial justice and planning social housing areas are expected to adapt to changing social and economic demands while retaining much valued established community character this book also provides practical strategies for tackling complex planning problems in social housing redevelopment some species survive reliant on conservation some may survive eluding our knowing some may not survive despite our efforts and some may survive by adapting to and integrating with human worlds new zealand is a unique and fascinating country as a case study for managing invasive species because of its history we know a lot about species introductions and because of its geographical position as a relatively small remote island the potential for dealing with invasive species may be more effective than elsewhere moreover the fragility of its ecosystems makes it relatively easy to see the impact of one species upon another nature and people shape the country s ecology from its geological and biological beginnings to the relatively recent arrival of people and the changes wrought to the wide ranging efforts of individuals and communities to protect and enhance treasured species and environments among them an ambitious predator free 2050 initiative to rid the country of some of its unwanted species the issue is a complex and interesting one there are ethical considerations which species are protected and which destroyed how are they destroyed what are the unforeseen consequences there are also tensions between preservation and the use of natural resources and ultimately our relationship to the environment how we live a land before humans a land after humans explores these issues an invaluable resource for environment ecology animal welfare and ethics students researchers and policy makers the book takes new zealand as a case study and looks at the practical and ethical considerations of dealing with invasive species 5m books unbreaking human colonization of new zealand has dramatically altered the resident biota introduced numerous alien organisms to these once remote islands and exported local species to the world this book reviews invasions investigates what controls the success of invaders and studies the consequences for ecosystems both on land and offshore the book tests current theories about the success of invaders and evaluates principles for effective management of biological invasions worldwide the story of invasive species in new zealand is unlike any other in the world by the mid thirteenth century the main islands of the country were the last large landmasses on earth to remain uninhabited by humans or any other land mammals new zealand s endemic fauna evolved in isolation until first polynesians and then europeans arrived with a host of companion animals such as rats and cats in tow well equipped with teeth and claws these small furry mammals along with the later arrival of stoats and ferrets have devastated the fragile populations of unique birds lizards and insects carolyn m king brings together the necessary historical analysis and recent ecological research to understand this long slow tragedy as a comprehensive historical perspective on the fate of an iconic endemic fauna this book offers much needed insight into one of new zealand s longest running national crises crime law and justice in new zealand examines the recent crime trends and the social political and legal changes in new zealand from the end of the twentieth century to the present serving as the only new zealand specific criminal justice text this book takes a direct look at what is unique about the country s criminal justice system and recent crime trends crime rates peaked in the early 1990s and have fallen since newbold considers why this happened through factors such as economy ethnic composition changing cultural trends and legislative developments in policing and criminal justice he unpacks various types of crime separately violent crime property crime drug crime gang crime organised crime etc and examines each in terms of the various complex factors affecting it using illustrative examples from recent high profile cases the cover photo for crime law and justice in new zealand was taken by jono rotman the campus novel is one of the best loved forms of fiction in the post war period but what are its characteristic themes what are its prejudices and what does it take for granted originally published in 1990 this is the first study to connect literary historical and sociological aspects of modern british universities it shows that the culture celebrated in british university fiction represents a particular view of humane education which has its origins in the values of oxbridge threats are seen to come from the redbrick and new universities from proletarians scientists including sociologists women and foreigners this exhilarating book makes a nonsense of sociology's reputation for turgid and plodding analysis sharp witted shrewd and penetrating it will be of interest to students of sociology literature and for the same wide audience that appears to have an insatiable appetite for stories about university life the tourism and leisure industries are big business opportunities for leisure and tourism have escalated as disposable income technology travel and education have become increasingly available in recent times however this trend has been juxtaposed with an increase in crime particularly since the early the 1950s acquisitive crimes have been facilitated with the development of more portable and valuable commodities some activities such as drink driving and disorder have now been socially defined as crimes and are more readily identified through new technology such as the increasing use of cctv the problem of pleasure covers them all the purpose of this book is to inform and enlighten a range of readers whose interests may be academic or commercial on possible crime events and modus operandi of criminals the book has a global perspective bringing together leading academics from the uk the us south africa australia and new zealand who examine several aspects of leisure that are vulnerable to crime from illegal hunting to street racing as well as the impact of crime upon tourists and the tourism industry this book will be a key text for students of tourism and leisure as well as criminology and sociology people working in the tourism and recreation industry policy makers and the police

this innovative book investigates the concept of collapse in terms of our built environment exploring the future transition of modern cities towards scenarios very different from the current promises of progress and development this is not a book about the end of the world and hopeless apocalyptic scenarios it is about understanding change in how and where we live collapse is inevitable but in the built environment collapse could imply a manageable situation an opportunity for change or a devastating reality collapsing gracefully means that there might be better ways to coexist with collapse if we learn more about it and commit to rebuild our civilisations in ways that avoid its worst effects this book uses a wide range of practical examples to study critical changes in the built environment to contextualise and visualise what collapse looks like to see if it is possible to buffer its effects in places already collapsing and to propose ways to develop greater resilience the book challenges all agents and institutions in modern cities their designers and planners as well as their residents and users to think differently about built environment so as to ease our coexistence with collapse and not contribute to its causes
